toms. Recent papers bring out news to the effect that it has been agreed between Lord CLARENDON and Mr. BURLINGAME, that British subjects in China shall conform to Chinese customs and usages. It may, therefore, be desirable that they should have the opportunity of clearly understanding what secret of the manner in which Chinamen are able to work a trade, consists in the peculiar power of the Guilds. It is important to observe that the opposition which foreigners complain of so much is not exerted exclusively. This may go on for months, and perhaps ! the stranger will have his turn. In the course anybody is mobbed in the streets for buying direct from the Canton men, they mob in the classics is called order and harmony. The process may be a peculiar one and not a little repugnant to the ideas of foreigners,

Life's occan crossed, on Henren's sands. -Chambers Journal. In Totoridge Church is barried a Indicana who deserved the fate which Harl Hassell met-I mean Lord Mohan. Mrs. Bracegirdle was the l reigning favorite on the stage at that time. A mong those who pursued her was Hill, a friend of Lord Mohan's, a nobleman-I quote Lord Macaiday—whose life "was one long revel and brawl?" They resolved to run away with the actress. They waited for her, with some soldiers, in Drury-lane. As soon as she appeared in the street they attacked her coach; her cries alarmed the neighborhood, she was rescued, and Hill and Lord Mohun remained in the neighgered," writes Macaulay, "two hours about on moderate terms. the streets, near Mountford's dwelling. The watch requested them to put up their weapons; but when the young Lord announced he was a peer, and bade the constables touch him if they hired, they let him pass." Messengers were sent to warn Mountford of his dauger, but unhappily they missed him. The bated rival came, and he was run through by Hill. The Grand Jury of Middlesex returned a bill of murder against Hill and Mobun. The latter was taken; his mother threw berself at William's feet. "It is a cruel act." said the King," Lishall leave it to the law," Mohun was tried by his peers, and acquitted by sixty-nine votes to fourteen. One great nobleman was so stupid and so brutal as to say. "After all, the fellow was but a player, and players are rognes." Lord Macaulay says: No person who carefully examines the reports of the proceedings, and attends to the opinions unanimously given by the Judges in answer to a question which Nottingbam drew up, and in which the facts established by the evidence are stated with perfect fairness can doubt that the crime of murder was brought home to the prisoner. Such was the opinion of the King. who was present during the trial, and such was the almost unanimous opinion of the public. Had the issue been tried by Holt and twelve
